

Presentation to the London Health and Care Leaders Forum

Ara Darzi
Chair, London Health Commission

11 March 2014

LONDON
HEALTH COMMISSION

A stylized graphic of a city skyline at the bottom of the slide, composed of various heights of rectangular blocks with a fine, light green hatched texture. The skyline is positioned behind the text of the London Health Commission logo.

Progress on the London Health
Commission

LONDON HEALTH COMMISSION

Timeline of the Commission

December 2013

- Published scope and Call for Evidence

December to February 2014

- Call for evidence period

February to July 2014

- Developing analysis and proposals
- On-going public and stakeholder engagement

July 2014

- Draft report published
- Further public and stakeholder engagement

Autumn 2014

- Publication of final report

Background to the London Health Commission:

An independent inquiry, chaired by Ara Darzi and reporting directly to the Mayor of London.

Examining how London's health and wellbeing, healthcare and the health economy can be improved for the benefit of the population.

Underpinned by engagement with the public, local government, the NHS, business, the voluntary and community sector, and others.

Final report to be produced in Autumn 2014 which describes the future vision for health and wellbeing in London and makes recommendations for the Mayor, NHS and other stakeholders.

There have been many London reviews – so we need to reflect on how this Commission can make an impact:

Increasingly cities are the innovators of health improvement

When London acts, it has national and international resonance

Use the voice of an independent Commission to engage patients, the public and London

Leverage the Mayor's position and powers

Reflecting what we've heard so far, five principles are influencing how the Commission is working:

1.
Connect and engage with Londoners

2.
Use London's strengths to address
its challenges

3.
Understand past successes and failures

4.
Take a global view

5.
Build a coalition for change

A number of issues are emerging from our Call for Evidence and work so far:

Health and Wellbeing

What can London do to take a step change on health and wellbeing?

Integrated care

What can the Commission do at a pan-London level to facilitate integration of health and social care, at scale and pace?

Self-care

How can the Commission support individuals and communities to engage more in their own health and care?

Information and Technology

What can be done in London to accelerate the Information and Technology agenda?

Applying Innovation

How can we work to get take-up of the right approaches in public health and healthcare?