

Our nursing and midwifery people

Celine Grundy - Quality Improvement Clinical Manager, Midlands Partnership Foundation Trust

On a typical day

I support frontline staff to make changes to support improving quality, safety effectiveness and efficiencies, through the use of robust quality improvement tools and techniques.

One way I've made a difference as a nurse or midwife

With help from Health Education England, I have supported the growth of frontline digital champions within our organisation. This has included introduction of low-level technology such as FLO (self-management texting service), and the use of Facebook, apps, virtual huddle boards and self-help videos to support clinical staff patients and carers.

We have had three launches to share and spread the digital champion work and encouraged staff to be part of this exciting new group. We have now over 100 front line staff who have become champions.

What would you say to someone considering a career in nursing or midwifery?

After 34 years of working as a nurse within the NHS, I still have an exciting and fulfilling career. There are so many opportunities available to you which always will support care delivery.
