

Easy read newsletter

Number 19 - July 2025

This newsletter includes information about:

Mental capacity act guidance

Building better lives in the community

Annual health checks

How to get support and speak up

Who should read the newsletter

People with a learning disability and autistic people with a learning disability.

Families, carers, and advocates.

Community groups, charities and advocacy groups who can explain to their members any difficult ideas and use these for information sessions.

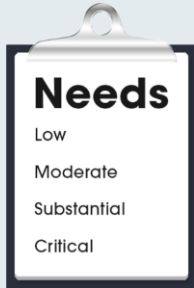

You may find some of the information in this newsletter upsetting, so please make sure you can talk to someone, if you need to.

We have included links to webpages so you can find out more.

Words we use

The newsletter is for people who have different needs and skills.

It can be difficult for some people to understand health services.

We try our best to use words that people know.

Hard words are in bold and purple.
We explain the hard words.

If you don't understand any words, ask someone to explain them to you.

In this newsletter

Mental capacity act guidance -
page 5

Building better lives in the community -
page 9

Annual health checks - page 12

How to get support and speak up -
page 16

Keep updated - page 19

Mental capacity act guidance

There is a public organisation that looks at how safe patients are when they are using health services.

It looked at the care of people with a learning disability in hospitals.

They said that staff in hospitals did not always know how to tell if someone with a learning disability had capacity under the mental capacity act.

Capacity means being able to make decisions for yourself.

Mental capacity act guidance

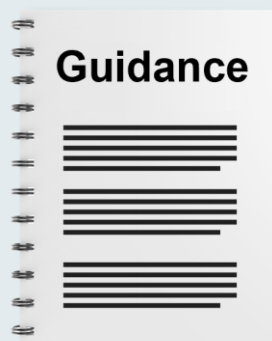

We have written some advice (guidance) for staff in hospitals about capacity.

You can find the guidance on the NHS England website Guidance to support implementation of the Mental Capacity Act in acute trusts for adults with a learning disability

We worked with people with lived experience, experts and staff in the NHS to write the guidance.

We made some tools to help doctors and nurses follow the mental capacity act when they are caring for people.

Mental capacity act guidance

What staff should do:

- staff in hospitals should use reasonable adjustments to help you understand information

- they should carefully check if you are able to make decisions about treatment you may have for your health condition

If you can't make a decision for yourself, they will involve your family or other people who know you.

Mental capacity act guidance

Once health staff have talked to the people who know you best, they will make a decision in your best interest.

A best interest decision is where everyone involved in your health and wellbeing make the best decision together on your care and treatment.

It is important for you to know about the mental capacity act.

For more information on the mental capacity act for England visit Mental Capacity Act 2005: what the law says about supporting people to make decisions about their lives

Building better lives in the community

We know that helping people to build better lives in the community means reducing restrictive practices that are not needed.

Restraint can be described as making someone do something they don't want to do or stopping someone doing something they want to do.

Different types of restraint are called restrictive practices.

We are working with other health and care organisations to reduce restrictive practices for adults with a learning disability and autistic adults living in their own homes.

Building better lives in the community

The work is looking at highly restrictive care and support in the community.

Highly restrictive care and support means more than 2 staff with a person at the same time.

People with a learning disability and autistic people say that having this many staff with them can be difficult.

It could be a form of restraint or restrictive practice.

Building better lives in the community

We coproduced a plan with people with a learning disability and autistic people, their families, and other people in their care.

We have meetings called 'building better lives in the community network', 4 times a year.

We hear people's stories of how restrictions have been reduced.

You can find out more about the network by emailing england.communitydevelopment@nhs.net and how reducing restrictions may help you or your loved one.

Annual health checks

It is important that people with a learning disability have an annual health check and get a health action plan to help people live longer and healthier lives.

Annual health checks are once a year checks, for people with a learning disability who are on the GP learning disability register and are 14 years old or older.

The GP learning disability register is a list of people with a learning disability that the GP (doctor) practice looks after.

A health action plan should include:

Annual health checks

- what your health goals are

- what your GP (doctor) is going to do

- what you are going to do to look after your health

- health action plans should be easy to understand and available on paper or digitally, for example being emailed to your phone

Best practice for annual health checks:

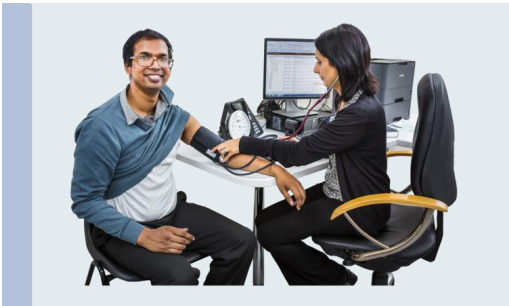

Annual health checks

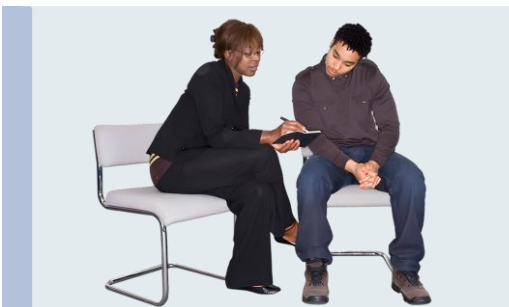

- annual health checks should be at least 40 minutes long and be face to face

You may be seen by different health care professionals during your annual health check, which should include:

- checking your blood pressure, weight, height, measuring your waist

- talking to you about the health conditions you have and any medicines you take

- talking to you about your thoughts and feelings (mental health)

Annual health checks

You can talk to your doctor or nurse about the kind of reasonable adjustments you need.

A reasonable adjustment is a change that a service can make, to help someone with a disability.

You can find out more about reasonable adjustments in newsletter 17.

To see what having an annual health check looks like, watch this video Harshi's learning disability annual health check and health action plan.

To see what having a health action plan looks like, watch this video Charlotte's annual health check and health action plan.

How to get support and speak up

If you are worried about the care and treatment the NHS is giving you, tell someone you trust straight away.

The image shows a sample of an NHS easy-read form. At the top, it says 'Please fill in this easy read form' next to a small icon of a person holding a sign that says 'easy read'. Below this are three input fields: 'Your name' with a person icon, 'Address' with a house icon, and 'Phone' with a mobile phone icon.

The NHS has made an easy-read form. It helps you tell staff or a service what you think could be done better.

Find the form by visiting www.speakup.org.uk and click on projects and search for 'Ask, Listen, Do'.

Ask someone to help you fill in the form if you need to.

People who can help you

An Advocate can help you to tell people what you need to try and get you the right health and social care support.

Find out more about advocates on the NHS website.

The NHS Patient Advice and Liaison Service (PALS) can support with healthcare queries or problems. If you are in hospital, you can ask staff how to contact PALS.

Or visit What is PALS \(Patient Advice and Liaison Service\) to find out more and your nearest PALS office.

People who can help you

Your local Healthwatch can help with questions about your GP, hospitals, dentists, pharmacies, care homes or other support services.

To find out more about Healthwatch visit Healthwatch easy read

National Network of Parent Carer Forums
'Our Strength is our Shared Experience'
www.nnpcf.org.uk

If you are a parent carer, you can contact your local parent carer forum. Parent carer forums can help services in their area meet the needs of disabled children and young people and their families.

Find your local parent carer forum

Keep updated

This newsletter was created by the NHS England learning disability and autism programme, with member representatives from our advisory group.

The newsletter used photosymbols from their library. 'Photosymbols' agree that NHS England can use them.

Get in touch if you want to tell us anything about this newsletter.

You can either phone us on 0113 824 9686 or email us at engage@nhs.net

Facebook:

[NHS England learning disability
and autism programme](#)

X (was called Twitter):

@NHSAbility

Email: engage@nhs.net